POLLY LARKIN

"Polly, why is it that so many people when they are in company cannot act naturally?" asked a little friend the other day. "Now, take me, for instance. I give myself the credit of being as sensible and clever as the majority of girls one meets in every day life. Not brilliant by any manner of means, still I am not what you would call stupid. Yet, when I go into company, I lose my personality entirely and am nothing but a simpering, giddy girl, giggling at everything and don't advance a single thought that is worth remembering. I am constantly dreading having to cross the floor alone. The evening passes in a whirl of excitement, and when I get home I begin to recall this thing and that thing I have been guilty of until I am perfectly miserable and disgusted with myself and I fairly dread going out of an evening. Even my hands and feet are in the way and I invariably get tangled up in my trailing dress. My awkwardness is simply horrible and I imagine everyone is feeling sorry for me or commenting on my stupid blindness. I look about me and see some one of my own age and note how self-possessed they seem. How perfectly at home with every subject they seem to be as they comment freely and naturally with acquaintances and strangers alike. No one knows how I envy them; how I resolve to pattern after them, and how my good resolves take flight the moment I enter a room filled with guests. The excitement seems to intoxicate me and at once I become flippant, if you will excuse the expression, or, as the girls term it, giddy. Away go my common sense ideas and I am painfully conscious of my shortcomings. I long to get in a corner and watch the people around me as they move and pass in panoramic view. Here they are, now they are gone. I study the sea of faces with intense interest and I am happy. The same confession must be made when it comes to the simple little evening entertainments at the homes of my friends. Although at the latter places I can get off quietly into a nook or corner with some friend who is equally as miserable as myself when in company and together we have a fairly good time. I never go out to spend an evening but what I pass hours in dreading the ordeal. Now, what is the matter with me, Polly, and what is the remedy you would advise for this unpleasant state of affairs?"

Easy enough answered, little friend. You are a sensitive, shy little body and unfortunately very self-conscious. You imagine everybody's eyes are on you, every move you make is observed, and every word you utter you feel sounds as clear and loud as a clarion note, when in reality you are speaking in so low a tone that your companion has to be on the alert to catch the words. The remedy is—don't think about yourself. Forget you are existing, or in other words, try and make it agreeable for some one else who you perhaps have seen suffering keenly from the same malady that affects you, my dear.

I heard a lady reprove her daughter not long since for this timidity, and it struck me as being almost cruel, still it had the desired effect. All evening long this young girl had suffered, no one knows how keenly unless they are of the same timid, shrinking nature. There was a buzz of many voices and peals of rippling laughter that rang out merrily, yet it was only a conglomeration of confusing sounds to the poor girl, who met her mother's disapproving glance every now and then, and who constantly dragged her out of the corner she had taken refuge in. The poor girl tried to appear cheerful and as though she was enjoying herself, but it was a dismal failure. I happened to be present the next morning when the mother reproved her daughter for what she termed her awkward behavior of the night before. "I was simply ashamed of you last night, Margaret," she said to the girl, who had been nerving herself up all morning to meet this trying ordeal that she knew must come. "Do you think yourself of so much importance," she said coldly and sarcastically as well, "that the gaze of everybody in the room is being directed to you? If you were a great beauty, or if you were brilliant in conversation, or so graceful or willowy in your movements that one's gaze would naturally be riveted on you, then you might have reason to believe that you were the cynosure of all eyes. You are not of any more consequence than the rest of the young people who attend these parties and who are sensible enough to know that they are not of enough importance to attract the attention of anybody in the room unless they make an effort to do so. You have made a grievous blunder, and I trust you will never be guilty again of making so unfavorable an appearance as you did last night." "Oh, mother," gasped the poor girl, turning white and red by turns, "you know I never thought of appearing in that light. You make me so ashamed, but I cannot help feeling perfectly wretched when I am out in company. I would much rather stay at home with a good book and let the other girls go in my place. You make me so ashamed of myself. I know I create a very bad impression, but I cannot help it." "You can help it, however," replied her mother, "and what is more, you will just as soon as you lose the impression that you are so important that you are the center of attraction, enjoy yourself as much as the other girls." The mother, in speaking of the matter afterward, said: "You don't know how I hated to speak to Margaret in the cold and unfeeling way that I did, but it was for her own good, and she realizes it now, although I know she shed many bitter tears after our little talk. She took the lesson to heart, and now she goes to parties and enters into the spirit of the evening and enjoys it as much as any of her girl friends. It does not pay to be too self-conscious, it robs you of half the enjoyment of life. Self-conscious people are never at their ease, but always appear more or less awkward. It is the greatest bane to the happiness of shy and over-sensitive people.

The Scandinavian people have some peculiar ideas and customs in regard to their marriages. For instance, the bridegroom gives his betrothed a prayer book and other gifts, which usually include a goose. She, in turn, gives him, especially in Sweden, a shirt, and this he always wears on his wedding day. Afterward he lays it away, and under no circumstances of stress or poverty will he wear it again while alive. But he wears it in his grave, and there are Swedes who devoutly believe not only in the resurrection of the body, but in the veritable resurrection of the betrothal shirts of such husbands as have not broken their marriage vows.

BRIEF REVIEW.

Nurses for Dogs the Latest Fad.

Dog nursing is growing popular in London. It pays better than typewriting. A visitor to the kennels of the Dogs' Protective League describes the scenes there as resembling those in any of the large hospitals for human beings. Fair female nurses attend to every want of the ailing dogs, which are encased in swaddling clothes on couches. When convalescent the dogs have the run of their ward. An official of the hospital says: "Some of the canines have to be nursed all night long or they would tear away their clothes and do themselves any amount of harm." Thousands of dogs have been received in the hospital since it was opened. Two veterinary surgeons superintend the institution, which has a staff of trained nurses. A woman applying as a dog nurse is taken on probation and ultimately graduates. Then she goes out to attend dogs at their own homes. She is taught how to prescribe for a sick dog, how to physic, diet and clothe it.

Whisky Drinkers Decreasing in Size.

Are the British as a race deteriorating in physique? Doctors declare that they are. Naval and military experts complain that the type of recruit for both services is of a lower standard than it used to be. An examination into the causes showed that it is largely due to intemperance. Of the 116,000 cases of insanity at present in asylums, probably 11,000 male and 6,000 female cases are the direct or indirect outcome of alcoholic excess. Alcohol, Dr. Jones, who is medical superintendent of the Claybury asylum, believes to be devitalizing not only to the individual, but also to the race. The community loses by its interference with the working power of the skilled craftsman and the artisan, and the presence of the inebriate injures the younger generation directly by neglect and cruelty, and indirectly by evil influence and example.

College Girls Go Armed.

Some of the Wellesley College girls are now carrying pistols. The authorities of the college have of late been considerably alarmed by repeated visits to the college grounds of numbers of very tough-looking young men after night-fall. These unwelcome visitors, it is thought, come from Nantick and nearby towns with the intention of "flirting" with or scaring the young women. The girls have not flinched, but they have armed for protection. So stirred up are the authorities over the matter that they have forbidden the girls to go out alone on the college grounds after dark.

Woman 116 Years Old Ashamed Of It.

A widow who was admitted the other day into the Buda Pesth poor-house gave her age as 116. When her birth certificate was examined it was found that she was born in 1788, her true age, therefore, being 116. When asked why she had not given the right date she replied that she was ashamed of being so old. It may be a consolation to some similarly afflicted to know that this lady, Frau Borson, has suffered from an affection of the heart for 30 years.

When a woman drives a man to drink he would probably have found the way alone all right.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

Current Events Specially Selected and Condensed.

Hugh C. Agnew, a prominent seed-grower of Santa Clara county, died from glanders, caught from his buggy horse.

The California Northwestern Railroad will put on a special fruit train from the Sebastopol country for the summer. The fruit interests of Sebastopol and vicinity have suffered by the lack of shipping facilities.

Mrs. Catherine Bundage, the oldest woman in Ventura county, and one of the oldest, if not the oldest, in California, died at Ventura at the age of 102 years and 9 months. She was born in Western New York in September, 1801. Charles Reynolds, alias Chas. Brown was held by Police Judge Fritz, of San Francisco, in $2000 bonds to answer a charge of robbery. It is alleged that on May 18th he held up Stephen Spelman of 230 Lombard street and took $6000 from him.

R. P. Jones of Bakersfield received word from Portland of the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. E. E. Jones, who was burned to death in her home by the explosion of a lamp which set fire to her clothing. The house and contents were completely destroyed.

Fire broke out in the snow sheds along the line of the Central Pacific Railroad between Cisco and Tamarack, and owing to the heavy north wind, destroyed some 2100 feet of shed before the fire train, which was dispatched to the scene succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

George Roberts of Arroyo Grande, charged with the murder of Night Watchman Lewellyn of that place, was sentenced by the jury. The jury exonerated him on the grounds that Lewellyn had made threats against Roberts and had been following him with intent to do injury to him.

Leslie Roades and Jules Perkins, two young men who recently arrived in Chico from Mountain Meadows, Lassen county, were arrested on charges of robbery, the complaints having been sworn to at Susanville. It is claimed that the young men relieved an old man, who was drunk, of $500.

A man giving his name as James S. Presure is under arrest at Long Beach on suspicion of being implicated in the recent hold-up of the clerk of the Pacific Electric Railway Company and the robbery of the company's safe. He denies any knowledge of the affair, but will be held until his record can be investigated.

The owners of the Pacific Telephone Company of Mendocino county, with lines from Laytonville to Calito, have determined to extend their system to Sherwood from Laytonville. Some of the new lines will be connected with the new terminal of the Sunset Telephone Company at Willits. This will give two direct routes by wire to San Francisco from Laytonville.

A brutal attack was made on San Jose two unknown persons upon a well-known little Italian junk dealer named Joseph Rebasso, who is familiarly called "Shorty the Ragman." The assault was made on him as he was going to his home. The men approached as if to shake hands. One of them felled him with a blow on the head from a club. No motive is known for the attack.

Rudolph Speck, the financial secretary of the Brewery Drivers' Union, No. 227, and general supervisor of all the brewery drivers' unions on this Coast, has disappeared from San Francisco and with him has gone about $4,000 belonging to the union of which he was a trusted officer. Some of his friends think that Speck went to Mexico, where he had several friends interested in mines, while others of his union associates declare that Speck has gone to some lonely spot and sent a bullet through his brain.

As Joseph Manning lay beneath the traction engine of which he was engineer at Al Smith's sawmill, fifty miles southeast of Redding, the engine was started by Fireman Tom McCoy. Manning's left arm was caught in the cogs between the heavy wheels, drawn in and ground to a pulp as far up as the shoulder before the engine could be stopped. Manning died at midnight. The fireman says he had crawled beneath the engine to effect some repairs and gave orders to pull ahead. Manning leaves a wife and six children.

The police of San Francisco have been asked to look for Mrs. Julia Kell, seventy-four years of age and said to be demented, who has been missing from her home for several days. She has wandered away from home before while suffering from attacks of mental aberration, but has turned up each time at the home of one of her daughters. None of her daughters has seen her since her recent disappearance, and they are worried for her safety. Mrs. Kell when last seen wore a black dress and a black hat trimmed with violets and a black ribbon.

A mass meeting of the property owners of Berryessa was held for the purpose of assisting in the construction of an electric railway from San Jose to Berryessa. An executive committee was appointed for the purpose of aiding Mehling & Lockwood, the promoters of the enterprise, in securing a right of way. The road will be of standard gauge, and will run from the heart of San Jose to Berryessa, a distance of five miles, ending in a large park which will be built by the railroad company with the assistance of the citizens. The work of construction will begin as soon as the rights of way are secured.

There appears to be some difficulty in filling the position of medical superintendent of the Southern California Hospital for the Insane. Since Dr. M. B. Campbell resigned the place has gone begging. There are plenty of physicians who would like the opportunity, but those who desire it, as a general thing, do not come up to the requirements of the law and those who are qualified do not appear to want the place. Dr. F. W. Hatch, General Superintendent of State Hospitals, says that the difficulty of obtaining a proper man for the office grows out of the fact that the law requires that the superintendent at Highland shall be a homeopathist who has devoted a number of years to the study of mental diseases and care of the insane. Up to the present no man thus qualified has come out for the position.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Young Ladies Hurt In Runaway

What might have proven a very disastrous accident happened at Agua Caliente on Tuesday.

Two young ladies who are spending their vacation at Home Farm were out driving when the horse became suddenly frightened and ran away, throwing the occupants out and damaging the buggy considerably.

Both young ladies were severely cut about the scalp and will be kept busy for some days nursing many painful bruises. That neither was seriously hurt seems almost miraculous.

Agua Caliente Arrivals

Some of the recent arrivals at Caliente Springs are: J. W. Stevens, father of Ashton Stevens, the noted writer, and Leander Stevens, the celebrated actor; Captain N. I. Messer, installer of acetylene gas plants; Patrick George Nolan, land owner of County Mayo, Ireland. He is touring the State, accompanied by his wife and son. Mr. J. E. Martin, an orchardist of Riverside and Los Angeles counties. Mr. T. V. Harrington of Harrington Book Company of San Francisco. He is accompanied by his wife. Mr. Howard of San Francisco, a school director. Mr. M. H. Maris, a prominent crockery merchant of the metropolis. Mr. J. Y. Ayer, for the past twenty years with Wells Fargo & Co. He is accompanied by his wife and friends. C. N. McMahon of Detroit, Michigan, professor of physical culture. Edward A. Godding, of New York, who is touring the State. Thomas Murphy, a well known contractor of the metropolis. L. V. Doyle and wife of San Francisco.

The management of the grand garden party given at the beautiful Agua Caliente Springs last Saturday evening are to be congratulated on the immense success of the affair in every way.

The entire program was highly entertaining throughout. The crowd that gathered at the springs was great and far beyond the number at first expected. Several hundred dollars were realized for St. Francis' Church.

Baseball

The greatest game of the season is promised next Sunday afternoon at the Chase grounds.

The game will be between the Sonomas and the Ideals of San Francisco. Admission only 15 cents; 10 cents for children.

Last Sunday a practice game was played between the Bear Flags and the Sonomas and resulted in a decided victory for the latter team.

In the Superior Court Friday the will of the late Mrs. Dorothea Duhning of Sonoma was filed for probate by the executor named therein, Frederick T. Duhning, son of the deceased. The will is an holographic one written and signed by the deceased herself in 1890. After bequeathing all her jewelry to her daughter, Mrs. Agnes Ryland, the testator directs that the remainder of her property shall go to her son and daughter in equal shares. The petition states that the estate is worth above ten thousand dollars. It is understood that the property is worth considerably more.

LITTLE WOMEN.

Nature dates womanhood from the period when the womanly function is first established, so that nature's little women are school-girls, shop-girls, etc. And therein lies a danger. This period is one of the most important in a woman's life, the mental effort of study, the physical effort of labor, are doubly exhausting at this season, and coupled with neglect or ignorance are often responsible for irregularity and other womanly ailments.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription may be relied upon to carry the woman safely through this period, as it does through maternity and the later change of life. This great medicine establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Everything that could be thought of was done to help her, but it was of no use. She kept failing and I gave up, thinking she must die. I must say, Doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription' my daughter would have been in her grave to-day. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established, and we bought another one, making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Advisor, in paper covers, is sent FREE on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing ONLY. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Hall Weds Mrs. Abbe

Montrose Treadwell in the Southland

The marriage of Mrs. Abbie Montrose Treadwell, widow of James Treadwell, and Dr. Walter C. Hall of Petaluma, which took place in Los Angeles Tuesday afternoon, became known almost immediately after the ceremony had been performed, although efforts were made by the contracting parties to keep the wedding secret. In Petaluma and San Francisco, where the couple are well known and have relatives, the news was received with interest and surprise, and it was hinted that the marriage was the culmination of a romance begun when the two were schoolmates.

This is the third matrimonial venture of Mrs. Hall, who was formerly Miss Abbie Waters of Petaluma, her stepfather being Mr. May, a prominent rancher of that place. When just coming into womanhood the present Mrs. Hall spent some years studying at the Boston Conservatory of Music. While there she met Professor Drivers, who later came to San Jose, where the two were married. They lived happily together for a short time and two children were born, but after some years a divorce was granted the wife in Sonoma county. A year or so later the marriage with James Treadwell, the young millionaire, took place, but several sensational episodes marred the domestic relations, and in October, 1902, Treadwell shot himself. The affair happened at Rubi Canyon, north of Pasadena, where the husband and wife had gone for a day's outing. While there Treadwell shot his wife, inflicting a severe wound, and then committed suicide. The widow lived in comparative retirement, and in the settlement of the estate received an interest in the famous Treadwell mine in Alaska. From this she receives a considerable income.

Dr. Hall, to whom she was married Tuesday, is the son of well-to-do parents in Petaluma. He is a very young man and has been practicing about one year since securing his diploma. It is said that he and his bride were sweethearts when she was a girl.

They will do their own slaughtering and in addition to supplying the residents of Sonoma with meats, will supply the wholesale trade in that vicinity. Mr. Cummings is a popular Santa Rosa man and while his friends there regret that his business venture will take him from their midst, rejoice that he is going to start in for himself.

A LOST ISLAND.

Ola West Indian Legend That Dates Back to Columbus' Time.

There is an old legend in the West Indies which has been handed down from the time of Columbus to the effect that somewhere among the numerous cays of the Caribbean sea there exists an island inhabited only by women.

The aboriginal Caribs and Arara-wacs found it inconvenient to have women around in times of war. Usually when the enemy conquered a number of the tribe's fairest maidens were carried off. So goes the story.

The deplorable possibility of losing all the women of the tribe was averted, however, by the prompt action of the chiefs, who ordered all of the remaining female element to this unknown island in the Caribbean. According to the legend, the place is copiously watered by ideal streams, over-shadowed by breadfruit, mango, plantain and all the necessities to life and poetry. The husbands and lovers were allowed to visit the island paradise not more than twice a year in times of peace.

But it is further handed down that all the men of the tribe were eventually wiped out in an Indian war and that all trace of the isle of women was lost. According to Washington Irving, even Columbus made vain efforts to find it.

CLEAN SHAVEN FACES.

A Contention That Every Man Should Show All His Features.

A recent writer, says the Chicago News, has this to say about beards:
"The ideal man is clean shaven. Confidently he exposes to the world his features undisturbed by hirsute appendages. Can we conceive the Apollo Belvedere with even a mustache? I doubt it. A merely honest man also, one would think, should wear no hair upon his face and for these reasons: Each of us in great measure, partly from exaggerated ideas of his own personality, partly from the stress of life, judges his neighbor from his face. His clothes are but a doubtful index of his character, but his features are, we firmly believe, indicative of his nature and his mode of life.

"There may be villainy written large on his upper lip. A certain mold of chin betrays its owner as a man of considerable homicidal tendencies. Cover the lips with a waterfall mustache, drape the chin with an Assyrian beard, and it may well be that this murderous monster is a pleasing enough fellow to view. Such a one does not venture to pass clean shaven through our streets. Let each one of us present in all candid such features as are his.

"To possess a receding chin is no crime. It is merely a sign of weakness. But to conceal it with a huge and bushy beard and thereby to present the appearance of a man endowed with great strength of will is surely a false pretense."

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

The Tragic Ending of the Life of the Talented Traitor.

The last twenty years of the life of Benedict Arnold were probably the most unhappy that ever fell to the lot of man. The British were willing to use him to promote their own plans and to pay him for his disgraceful services, but everywhere he was held in such scorn and contempt that for years he scarcely ventured to appear in public. Before his treachery he stipulated for a fortune in cash and a commission as major general in the British army.

He got both and soon spent the former in speculation, while the latter did him no good, as no officer in the army would serve under him, and, although his talents and bravery were unquestioned, he remained to the end of his days a general without command, even at a time when the British government was sorely pressed for officers and men. In 1786, during the French war, when the country was anxiously gathering all its resources he applied to the Duke of York for a command, but was refused.

He went home in despair and said to his wife, "They will not let me find a soldier's death." He never rallied after this blow, and soon after his mind appeared to wander. He ordered his Continental uniform to be brought and put it on, including the sword he had worn when in the American service, and so he died a raving maniac in 1801 at his residence in London.

Judge Shea Passed.

Some years ago Judge Shea, a New York lawyer, became chief justice of what was then the marine court and what is now known as the city court of New York. He went to England once and was registered at a hotel as "Chief Justice of the Marine Court, U. S. A." The lords of the admiralty and the judges of all the great British courts called upon him, put him up at their clubs, invited him to dinner and treated him with as much consideration as if the tribunal of which he was the head had been, as they supposed it to be, one of the great courts of the United States, instead of a purely city affair.

Judge Shea was never tired of recounting to his cronies how he had been treated in England on that memorable trip.

Animal Oils in Medicine.

The number of animal oils and fats used in medicine are extremely numerous. Large quantities of oil are obtained in Tasmania from the mutton bird and used as a liniment for rheumatism, while the fat of the frigate bird is said to be an excellent specific for sciatitis. Cod liver oil is too well known to bear more than mention, and the oil got from the dugong, an aquatic monster related to the whale tribe, has a high reputation as a substitute for that obtained from the smaller fry of the cod. From six to fourteen gallons of this medicinal oil can be taken out of a single animal.

Why He Changed Weapons.

"Here you is in trouble ag'in," said the colored deacon. "Didn't I tell you ter fight yo' way only wid de sword er de sperrit?"
"Yes, suh," replied the penitent, "but de razor wuz so handy."—Atlanta Constitution.

BRITISH GREAT SEAL

STRANGE ADVENTURES OF THIS EM-BLEM OF SOVEREIGNTY.

Fished From the Bottom of the River Thames, Buried in a Garden, Used as a Frying Pan and Broken to Pieces in the House of Lords.

It seems almost ludicrously impossible that the great seal of England should have ever been made to serve the humble purpose of a frying pan; and yet this is only one of many equally strange episodes in the romantic story of the seal which is the "specific emblem of British sovereignty."

Lord Chancellor Eldon was so fearful that the seal would be lost or stolen while in his custody that he never went to sleep without first satisfying himself that it was safe in his bedroom.
One night it was in the year 1812—he was roused from his slumbers by cries of "Fire!" Jumping out of bed he snatched up the great seal and, rushing into the garden, buried it deep in the middle of a flower bed. His house might be burned to the ground, but at least he would not prove unworthy of the great trust which had been reposed in him.

Next morning, however—so exciting had been the experiences of the night—he had completely forgotten in what part of the garden the emblem of sovereignty had been hidden, and it was only after his entire household had hunted for hours that it was at last run to earth. "You never saw anything so ridiculous," he wrote later, "as seeing the whole family down the walks dibbling with bits of sticks until we found it."

Once at least the great seal has been at the bottom of the Thames and would be there today but for a lucky accident. It was in 1688, when the second James was fleeing from England and the Prince of Orange to France, in company with Sir Edward Hales. He had intended to take the great seal with him, but as he was being rowed from Lambeth to Vaux-hall, where horses were awaiting him, another and better idea occurred to him. He would fling the seal into the river, and that would place it once for all out of reach of his enemy. So overboard the seal went, and for some weeks it lay there until by a curious chance it was picked up in a fisherman's net and restored to the proper custodians.

The ludicrous frying pan adventure befell it when in the custody of Lord Brougham. The chancellor had gone to Scotland for a short holiday—seeing that he could not take the seal on the Rhine trip he longed for without putting it in commission at great cost to himself—and he was a guest of the dowager Duchess of Bedford at Roth-emurich, where he kept his precious charge in his bedroom. One day the young ladies of the house party took the seal from the bedroom and hid it.
Brougham was desperate when he discovered his loss and did not recover his peace of mind until the pretty thieves promised to lend him to it if he would consent to be blindfolded.

With his eyes bandaged he was conducted to the drawing room, and there he discovered the seal hidden in a tea chest. So overjoyed was he at its recovery that he consented to the young ladies' suggestion that they should adjoin to the kitchen and celebrate the joyous event by making pancakes in the seal, and thus, amid much laughter, the greatest emblem of sovereignty in the whole world was actually used as a pan in which to fry pancakes. The seal, it should perhaps be mentioned, consists of two silver disks hinged together, so that when they are closed they form a mold, into which the wax, green, red or yellow, as the case may be, is poured. Thus it would make not at all a bad substitute for the common or kitchen frying pan.

Many a time has the great seal been taken to the house of lords and broken to pieces at the bar by the hammer of a sturdy blacksmith, and the frantic cheering of onlooking members. This was the fate of the seal which fell into the hands of the parliamentary army on the capitulation of Oxford in 1646.
Three years later the old parliamentary seal, which represented Charles enthroned on one side and riding on horseback on the other, was similarly destroyed to make way for the new seal with its view of the house of commons in place of the deposed sovereign.
Richard Cromwell's seal was broken by the hammer in 1659, and in the following year the great seal of the commonwealth itself was destroyed in the same way.

Once the seal was lost, by Charles II. in his flight from the fatal field of Worcester, and once it was stolen by burglars from Lord Thurlow's house in Great Ormond street, but it was replaced by a replica in the wonderfully short time of thirty-six hours. The seal that was in use when George IV. died was divided between Lord Lynd-hurst and Lord Brougham, King William IV. presenting one side to each chancellor, mounted in a magnificent salver, and a similar present was made in later years to Lords Chelmsford and Campbell and to Lords Selborne and Cairns. Of the handsome satchels or purses in which the seal is supposed to be kept—exquisite specimens of art needlework in white and gold—so many fell to the lot of Lord Thurlow as perquisites that his good lady was able to make several sumptuous counterpanes and bed hangings from them.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Escapes He Wanted.

"Is there danger from fire here?"
"Oh, no," replied the hotel clerk.
"We are well provided with fire escapes."
"I don't care a hang about that. How are you fixed for man escapes?"—Chicago Post.

Not In Practice.

"That man has studied political economy."
"Maybe so," said Senator Sorghum, "but the injudicious way he spends his money at an election looks to me like political extravagance."—Washington Star.
